Preface

This publication updates and complements "Input-Output tables for the United Kingdom 1968"(*) which was published last year and which contained a detailed account of how the tables were constructed from the basic data and how they can be manipulated to reveal economic structures.

The major difference in methodology between the tables for 1970 in this volume and the tables for 1968 is that the latter are based upon the detailed industry inputs and outputs, analysed by commodity, in the comprehensive 1968 Census of Production. These formed a firm basis for the detailed analysis of commodity outputs (Table A, the Make matrix) and of commodity inputs (Table B, the Absorption matrix) and also provided some basis for the analysis of final demand by commodity (Tables O, P and Q).

No such detailed data on industry inputs or on the commodities sold by industry were available for 1970. The annual Census of Production for 1970 only provided total figures, for each Census industry, of inputs and outputs, together with wages and salaries, fixed investment and stocks. Also the new quarterly system of sales statistics had only extended to a small part of industry by that year. Hence, the industry input structures for 1970 (Table B, the Absorption matrix) are based upon an updating of the 1968 input-output structure to 1970 using the RAS method. An account of the RAS method is given in Part II of the article 'Summary input-output tables for 1970' in the May 1974 issue of Economic Trends. The analyses of commodities made by industries and of commodities imported are also based upon the pattern of sales and purchases observed for 1968. Consequently the 1970 tables in this publication are not as reliable and firmly based as the 1968 tables, but they still provide the best comprehesive guide available to the structure of the United Kingdom economy for a recent year.

The industry and commodity categories in the 1970 tables are the same as those in the firmly-based 1968 tables, as also are most of the tables presented. Tables Q, S and T of the 1968 analysis have not been included however as they would still be wholly dependent on data for 1968.

The tables were compiled by the Central Statistical Office, and the help of the Business Statistics Office and other Government departments is gratefully acknowledged.

Notes on the tables

1 The figures for final demand and value added in these input-output tables are compatible with the data for 1970 given in the 1973 National Income Blue Book (*).

2 In the 1970 Census of Production a number of establishments previously included in the coke ovens industry were unable to report separate figures and their activities have been included with those of their parent establishments under iron and steel. For this reason the output of the coke ovens industry is less than that shown in the 1968 study and the iron and steel industry shows a much higher output of coke. A similar problem occurred but to a lesser degree in the mining and quarrying industry where certain establishments undertaking the mining of iron ore could no longer be identified separately and had to be classified to iron and steel. The inputs of these industries have been adjusted accordingly.

3 No information on the margins on merchanted goods in manufacturing industry was available for 1970. In the light of information derived from the 1963 and the 1968 studies it was decided to assume a uniform margin of 15 per cent for all manufacturing industry except tobacco where a zero margin was thought more appropriate.

4 A full analysis of re-exports of commodities is not available for 1970 and therefore many items imported for eventual re-export are included in the main body of the import matrix (Table C). Thus these items are treated as if purchased by industry for further processing, but this should not substantially distort the pattern of imports purchased by industry or through this the pattern of domestic purchases (which are obtained by subtraction). In a few cases where the item for re-export was very large (eg furs, blended tea and coffee, etc.) these purchases were added to the inputs and outputs of the miscellaneous services industry and shown as an export of the industry in Table B.

5 The analysis of consumers' expenditure given in Table O is consistent with the national accounts data at purchasers' prices. Because of the problems of balancing total output and total demand the distribution and service margins shown in Table O are to some extent derived as residual items and not too much importance should be attached to the fluctuations since 1968.

6 There was no detailed commodity survey of central government expenditure for the 1970/71 financial year. The analysis used in Table P is based upon an interpolation between the surveys for 1968/69 (described in Economic Trends for August 1971) and 1971/72.

7 The detailed analysis of capital formation (Table Q) is based on the detailed pattern of commodity purchases shown in the Census of Production for 1968. The plant and machinery elements of this table may be particularly liable to fluctuations from year to year and the data from this part of the table should be used with caution.

8 Tables L and N, the derived commodity × commodity tables, in this volume are based on a methodology consistent with that used in the industry × industry tables. As this was not the case in 1968, there will be some differences in calculations based on these matrices for 1968 compared to 1970.
