Introduction

In an Interim Report published in August 1951* the Cost of Living Advisory Committee recommended that an enquiry into the pattern of expenditure by private households should be held as soon as possible and that there should be smaller-scale enquiries at frequent intervals thereafter. The large-scale Household Expenditure Enquiry took place in 1953-54† and the smaller-scale continuing Family Expenditure Survey‡ began in 1957. In 1962 the Committee recommended the use of information obtained from the Family Expenditure Survey over a period of three consecutive years as a basis for annual revision of the weighting pattern of the official Index of Retail Prices.§ This recommendation was accepted by the Minister of Labour and a new series of the Index was started in January 1962.

The Ministry of Labour is the Department responsible for carrying out the Survey but the selection of the sample, the interviewing of households and the coding of the records is carried out by the Social Survey Division of the Central Office of Information.

As the Survey is multi-purpose in character and serves the needs of several government departments (primarily the Ministry of Labour and the Central Statistical Office) the detailed plans for each year's operations are considered by an interdepartmental committee under the chairmanship of the Director of the Central Statistical Office, and close liaison is maintained between the Ministry of Labour, the Central Statistical Office and the Social Survey in the day-to-day running of the Survey.

The households which provided the records on which this report is based are thanked for their co-operation.

Part I. Description of the Survey

Objects of the Survey

1. The Family Expenditure Survey is designed to meet a variety of needs. Information about the pattern of expenditure is required by the Ministry of Labour to provide the weights for the Index of Retail Prices. Information about incomes and expenditures is needed by the Central Statistical Office for three main purposes. These are to supplement the sources used in compiling the official estimates of national expenditure; to carry out demand analyses; and to study the redistributive effects on income of taxation and social benefits.

2. In addition, a growing number of requests for information derived from the Survey is received from other government departments, research and social workers, and private firms and organisations. So far as possible, these enquiries are met, provided that the required information is readily available and does not reveal particulars of an individual household.

Main features of the Survey

3. Each year a sample of about 5,000 addresses is selected and these are visited in rotation throughout the year. The households at these addresses are asked to co-operate in maintaining detailed expenditure records for 14 consecutive days, and in providing interviewers with information about the household, about incomes and about certain payments which recur fairly regularly (e.g. rent, gas, electricity and telephone accounts, licences and insurances, education, season tickets, and hire-purchase). Provided that all spenders in the household co-operate, each spender is subsequently paid £1 for the trouble involved in supplying the information.

Selection of households

4. The Survey covers all types of private households in the United Kingdom. The selection of the sample has to satisfy two main requirements, i.e. that every private household in the country should have an equal chance of being included in the sample, and that the sample should be spread as evenly as possible over the year.

5. The sample is drawn in two main stages. First, the areas in which the sample is to be drawn are selected from a list of local authority areas covering the country as a whole. These are stratified by a number of factors which are believed to influence expenditure. Second, the addresses to be visited are selected in the areas chosen. These are obtained by random selection from the Registers of Electors maintained for parliamentary and local government election purposes. An interval sample of electors is first drawn and the addresses selected for the sample are those where the selected elector happens to be the first entry on the Register for that address, thus giving an equal chance of selection to each address in a particular first-stage unit. The procedure for Scotland and Northern Ireland differs slightly from that for England and Wales. The method of selecting the sample is more fully described in Appendix I of the 1962 Report*.

Collection and processing of information

6. The arrangements for the 1963 Survey are similar to those described in paras. 6 - 23 of the 1962 Report*. Schedules similar to those reproduced in Appendix III of that Report were used in the 1963 Survey. Definitions contained in Appendix IV of the 1962 Report apply equally to 1963 except for housing costs for "Owner-occupied dwellings" (see para. 23).

Proportions of households co-operating

7. The sample of about 5,000 addresses visited each year contains some which are either found to relate to hotels, boarding houses, institutions, etc. (which are outside the scope of the Survey), or which contain no household at all. On the other hand, some of the addresses are found to contain more than one household.

8. Allowing for these cases an effective sample of about 4,800 households normally results. In some of these households one or more members refuse to co-operate or cannot be contacted after repeated visits. The co-operating households represented 72 per cent. of the effective sample in 1961, 74 per cent. in 1962 and 71 per cent. in 1963.

Part II. Results of the Survey

General Description of Report

9. The layout of the expenditure tables is similar to that used in earlier Reports but, in order to provide as great a variety of recent information as possible, analyses are included for certain groups of households which have not hitherto been separately distinguished in this series. (See paras. 21 - 28).

10. New features of the 1963 Report are the inclusion of additional and more detailed cross distribution analyses of the main characteristics of co-operating households (see paras. 12 - 13) and analyses of sources of income for selected groups of households. (See paras. 14 - 18).

11. On this occasion, because of the important effects of the 1963 revaluation on housing expenditure, this Report includes a special housing section comparing results for the pre-revaluation with the post-revaluation period. (See paras. 19 - 20).

Description of distribution tables

Description of main household characteristics by household income

13. Another series of distribution tables provides a cross classification of households in different household income ranges further classified by selected characteristics of the households in the Survey. These characteristics comprise income of head of household (Table C (below)); Standard Regions in Table D (1961-63 on page 6); type of administrative area in which the house-

Description of income tables

14. Tables K - O on pages 9 - 12 analyse gross household income by the sources from which the income is obtained. Details are given for households classified by ranges of household income, and also for households in certain ranges of household income sub-classified by income of head of household. Income as defined for the purpose of the Survey is before deduction of income tax, National Insurance contributions and any other deductions at source such as those made under non-state pension schemes.

15. Eight sources of income are listed below. Income components from different sources cover varying periods of time but all are converted to a common period of one week. The sources are:—

(a) Wages and salaries

As in 1962, "normal" wage or salary is taken. This is the gross amount the recipient would expect to receive each week or month ignoring variations caused by short-term absences from work or accidental fluctuations in earnings, but including the weekly value of substantial bonuses or other occasional additions to earnings. This procedure means that in a few cases the normal wage or salary is slightly overstated because it is substituted for a state benefit which is being temporarily received.

(b) Self-employment income

This comprises income, for the latest available year, from business or profession less depreciation allowances and expenses.

(c) Income from investments

This is grossed up to include income tax deducted at source.

(d) Income from non-state pensions and annuities

This includes deductions at source.

(e) State Retirement, Old Age and Widows' Pensions

These include National Assistance in cases where this is not separately distinguished.

(f) Other state benefits

These include National Assistance which is separately distinguished, but exclude current state benefits of workers who are temporarily unemployed or sick whose normal wage is taken in the income calculation.

(g) Income from sub-letting and/or owner-occupation

In the case of a rented or rent-free dwelling this is the excess of rent received over housing costs; when a dwelling is owner-occupied with no sub-letting the rateable value of the dwelling is taken. If an owner of an occupied dwelling is sub-letting it is the excess of rent received over housing costs or the rateable value of the dwelling whichever is the greater. The notional rental equivalent of owner-occupation is also included in expenditure and a fuller description is contained in para. 23 on page 18.

(h) Income from other sources

This category includes income from subsidiary and spare time occupations, regular income from relatives who are not included in the household, Trade Union and similar benefits and income of household members (usually young persons) who have not completed income schedules.

16. Income as defined above does not include withdrawals from past savings, proceeds from the sale of houses, cars, furniture or other capital assets, or receipts from legacies, maturing insurance policies or other windfalls.

17. In addition, to some extent, income information relates to periods further in the past than expenditure information. For instance "income from business or profession" is based on the last 12 months for which a figure can be given; the weekly equivalents of bonuses paid to employees are calculated from those received in the previous year; and (with the main exception of basic wages and state benefits) most of the sources of income are estimated from receipts during the preceding 12 months. Most of the expenditure information relates to the 14 days during which the household kept its records. For these reasons, and especially if prices are rising, income recorded for a particular household may, in some cases, fall short of expenditure for the same household.

18. Certain payments are recorded which relate to household savings or to the purchase of large capital assets. As neither withdrawals from savings nor net receipts from the sale of large assets are included in income, the inclusion of these payments in household expenditure can result in the average expenditures for quite large groups of households exceeding the average incomes of these groups.

Description of special housing tables

19. The new valuation lists which came into force in England and Wales in April, 1963, resulted in considerable changes in the rateable value of domestic property and some changes in the rates paid by households in different types of dwelling and in different income groups. For the 1963 Survey additional information was collected from local valuation offices in England and Wales about the pre- and post-revaluation rateable values of the dwellings of most of the co-operating households. Together with the rate poundages of the areas in which households were located, the rateable values were used to calculate the rates paid by the households before and after revaluation. Details were also collected of the type of tenure, the structural type and the age of the dwelling. A few households were excluded from this special study either because they occupied tied agricultural cottages, caravans or premises partly used for business, or because information about the rateable value was unobtainable.

20. These extra items of information made possible the special housing tables which follow. The first group compares old and new rateable values and rates for households in different income groups living in dwellings of different types of tenure (Table P on page 14), different structural types (Table Q on page 15), and different ages (Table R on page 16). The rateable values and rates are given as the average weekly values for the groups of households concerned. A further pair of tables provides a cross classification of post-revaluation rates in ranges of household income. The first of the pair (Table S on page 17) gives the numbers of the households in the analysis and the second (Table T on page 17) gives the corresponding percentage distributions of households over the income ranges, taking the numbers in one range of income as 100.

Description of expenditure tables

21. The expenditure tables in this Report are presented in a form comparable with that for tables in earlier Survey reports. In addition to expenditure*, the tables provide details of average weekly incomes†, and information about the average size and composition of the households in each group of households for which average expenditure details are provided. The General Notes to Expenditure Tables (page 21) should be read in conjunction with the tables in this Report.

22. All expenditures are shown as weekly averages per household, i.e. for each item the aggregate expenditure recorded by households in the group has been reduced to a weekly value and divided by the total number of households in the group, irrespective of the number incurring expenditure on the item. In the case of housing expenditures, however, it is sometimes necessary to consider the average payments for a particular type of accommodation by households occupying that type of accommodation and, therefore, average housing costs are also shown separately for households renting unfurnished accommodation, furnished accommodation, living rent-free and living in their own dwellings. Where households sub-let part of the dwelling they occupy, the amount received from the sub-tenant is deducted from the expenditure on rent, rates, dwelling insurance, etc. in order to arrive at their housing costs. When the amount of the sub-let rent exceeds the total housing costs, the excess is treated as income.

23. A special problem arises in the case of households living in their own dwellings. Over half of this group were still making mortgage payments and the rest, whose dwellings were fully owned, were making payments only for rates, repairs, etc. In the tables in this Report, an imputed value or notional rental equivalent has been included in the expenditure of all owner-occupiers, whether or not they were making mortgage payments, and a similar amount has been taken into account as part of the income of owner-occupiers. Such a notional measure of the cost of owner-occupancy in terms of the income sacrificed exists in the rateable value. In England and Wales up to March, 1963, this was based on letting values in 1939 less an allowance for repairs, but new valuation lists which came into force in April, 1963 brought the rateable values up to date. Thus, rateable values recorded for households in England and Wales which co-operated in the first quarter of 1963 were on the average much lower than those for households which co-operated in any of the last three quarters. The housing costs shown for all owner-occupiers therefore consist of the weekly equivalents of the rateable value and of any actual payments for rates, repairs, etc. Mortgage payments and amounts paid for the outright purchase of dwellings or for major structural additions are not included as housing costs, but are shown elsewhere in the tables under "Other Payments Recorded". The average weekly equivalent of the rateable value is shown separately to enable an approximate adjustment to be made to take into account the differences between the old and the new rateable values. Detailed comparisons of old and new rateable values are contained in Tables P - R on pages 14 to 16.

24. For many purposes the proportions of household expenditure on different goods and services are of more interest than the absolute levels of expenditure. To obtain such proportions it is necessary to have figures of "total household expenditure", but since any definition of expenditure is to some extent arbitrary, the inclusion or exclusion of certain types of payment is a matter of convenience or convention, depending on the purpose for which the information is to be used. In the tables which follow, totals have been provided representing current expenditure on goods and services. Total expenditure defined in this way excludes payments which are really savings or investments (e.g. purchases of National Savings Certificates or shares; life insurance premiums; contributions to pensions funds). Income tax payments and National Insurance contributions, and mortgage and other payments for purchase of or major additions to dwellings are also excluded. All these types of expenditure, together with net betting payments (shown only in Table 2, page 26), appear under the heading "Other Payments Recorded".

25. Table 1 (page 22) shows, for all co-operating households, average weekly expenditure for 1963 and for the three-year periods 1958 - 60, 1959 - 61, 1960 - 62 and 1961 - 63. Table 2 (page 26) analyses the expenditure of co-operating households by gross income of households. Nine income ranges are distinguished and an "All Households" average is provided. The income ranges are similar to those used in Table 2 of the Report for 1962.

26. The remaining expenditure analyses differ from those in the 1962 Report. Tables 3 - 6 (pages 34 to 49) provide the expenditure of households classified by ranges of household income of under £10 a week (Table 3 on page 34), £10 but under £20 (Table 4 on page 38), £20 but under £30 (Table 5 on page 42), and £30 or more (Table 6 on page 46). The households in each of these four tables are further classified by the income of the head of the household.

27. Table 7 analyses the expenditure of households classified by the composition of the household. Ten family compositions comprising one adult; a man and a woman; a man, woman and child; a man, woman and two children; a man, woman and three children; a man, woman and four or more children; three adults; three adults with one or more children; all other households with children; and all other households without children are separately distinguished. Children are all persons under 16.

28. Table 8 (page 58) provides average expenditure for 1961 - 63 analysed by Standard Regions* of England with separate analyses for Wales and Scotland. The figures shown for the three-year period are unweighted averages of the yearly averages. No separate figures have been extracted for Northern Ireland since the numbers of households in the three years are too few to provide a reliable sample.

Reliability of the results

29. The results obtained from the Family Expenditure Survey are subject to approximation as are all estimates from sample investigations. This "sampling error" is smallest in relation to the average expenditure of large groups of households on items purchased frequently when expenditure does not vary greatly as between households. Conversely, it is largest in relation to small groups of households, and for items purchased infrequently for which expenditure shows considerable variation as between households. In the latter case the incidence of payments of extremely high or low value recorded in the survey period by households in a sample of this size may not be representative of the incidence of such payments by all comparable households. Large payments by one or two households may increase the level of average expenditure unduly, or exceptionally large numbers of households making no purchases may reduce the level correspondingly. Expenditures by groups of households for which the sampling error is known to be large are indicated by footnotes to Tables 1 - 8 (pages 22 - 65).

30. No adjustment has been made to the information provided by co-operating households. There is apparent under-recording of expenditure on alcoholic drink (only about half this expenditure seems to be included in the records), on tobacco (but to a much lesser extent), on meals out, chocolates, sweets and ice cream. Confectionery and ice cream purchased by children out of pocket money will usually be recorded simply as pocket money and not under the separate items. This will also contribute to the discrepancy for these commodities. On the other hand, slot meter payments for gas and electricity are overstated since no account has, so far, been taken of rebates received. Nor has any adjustment been made for the element of non-response which is an unavoidable feature of any sample investigation which has to rely on voluntary co-operation. The full co-operation of about one quarter of the households approached was not secured and the characteristics of households which did not co-operate, insofar as they could be ascertained, appear to differ slightly from the characteristics of those which did. Such differences may be reflected in differences in expenditure patterns.

31. Comparisons of successive years' results afford confidence in their general reliability, and examination of the different expenditure patterns of the various groups of households shows a marked degree of internal consistency. Some indications of the reliability of the Survey results and how this inevitably varies between different headings of expenditure are given by the percentage standard errors of the average weekly expenditures of all households co-operating in the Survey in 1963. These are contained in Appendix II on page 75. The standard errors for expenditures averaged over three years would usually be considerably lower than the standard error for 1963 only.

*For definitions, see "The Registrar General's Annual Estimates of the Population of England and Wales and of Local Authority Areas, 1962". H.M. Stationery Office, 1962.

General Notes to Expenditure Tables

1. The average number of persons per household has been rounded to two decimal places.
2. Both individual and total expenditure figures have been independently rounded to one decimal place of a penny. The sums of the constituent items do not, therefore, necessarily agree exactly with the totals shown.
3. "Nil" expenditures and expenditures of less than 0.05d. are both shown as "—".
4. Fuller details of the commodities and services listed in column 2 of the tables will be found in the Item Code reproduced in Appendix I on page 66.
5. The figures for the "Housing" group include, in addition to specific payments, the weekly equivalent of the rateable value of dwellings owned by their occupiers. Rateable values for households in England and Wales which co-operated in the last three quarters of 1963 are based on revaluation lists which took effect from April 1963. Prior to this date rateable values in England and Wales were those of 1939. Expenditure on the purchase or structural alterations of dwellings, including deposits and mortgage repayments, has been included at the end of each table under "Other Payments Recorded".
6. Expenditure on repairs to housing and to most household durable goods and vehicles has been included in the appropriate groups under "Housing", "Durable Household Goods" and "Vehicles", respectively. On the other hand, expenditure on repairs to clothing, footwear and other personal goods has been included under "Services".
7. Purchases, including hire purchase, of gas and electric appliances have been included in the "Durable Household Goods" group, but charges for the rental of gas and electric appliances have been included under "Fuel, Light and Power". No account has been taken of the rebates received in respect of certain slot meter payments for gas and electricity.
8. The recorded expenditure on alcoholic drink and tobacco and (but to a much lesser extent) on meals bought away from home, sweets, chocolates and ice cream are known to be understated.
9. Item Group reference 102 "Betting, payments less winnings" is included in Table 2 only.
10. Instances where average weekly expenditures of 2s. 0d. or more are known to have a relatively high sampling error are indicated by footnotes to the tables.

Appendix II

Standard Errors

The method of calculation of the standard errors which are contained in the following table is an approximate one, in that the co-operating households have been regarded as a representative sample, obtained by single-stage random selection, of all private households in the United Kingdom. The multi-stage sampling design, the stratification used in selecting households and the variations in the extent to which selected households in different groups co-operated have thus not been taken into account.

The method of calculation was as follows: the standard error of $\bar{e} = \sqrt{\frac{\sum (e - \bar{e})^2}{n(n-1)}}$

 e represents the weekly expenditure of each individual household on the item or group of items, \bar{e} represents the mean weekly expenditure of all households on the item or group of items, n represents the number of households, and \sum denotes summation over all households.

The percentage standard error of \bar{e} is the standard error of \bar{e} expressed as a percentage of \bar{e} . If this is 5 per cent. or above for an individual item group it is given to the nearest integer. As it cannot be assumed that this method of calculation would be satisfactory for sub-groups of households, reliable estimates of the standard errors of the average weekly expenditures of sub-groups of households cannot be obtained directly from those relating to all co-operating households simply by adjustment for the numbers of households in the sub-groups. In the case of expenditures based on three-year averages, the related standard errors would be expected to be $\frac{1}{\sqrt{3}}$ times those shown in this appendix.

* The figures relate to households which recorded expenditure on the item group during the 14 days of record keeping and, for some groups, during a longer period. (See para. 3, page 1 of this Report).

† The standard errors and average weekly expenditures for groups 1-5 above relate to the households within the specified groups. Standard errors and expenditures for all other groups in this table relate to the 3,415 households which co-operated in the 1963 Survey.

‡ A number of households showed no housing costs since the rent received from sub-letting exceeded the housing costs incurred.

§ A small number of households living in caravan, etc. accommodation recorded no rateable value.
